Syracuse. June 5.—The afternoon session of site Anti-Secret Society Convention was turned into a political meeting. About two hundred delegates were present. President Blanchard, of Wheat of College, submitted a presemble and resolutions for the formation of a national political party, opposed to secret societies. After a long delate, and some amendments, the report was adopted. The name of the party is to be the "American," and a platform of principles is to be trained by a committee of one from seall State. A national convention is to be called to nominate a Presidential candidate. The delate was very warm of the proposition to embody the hame of God in the Constitution, and as a plank in the platform, which was fornally-dorled. State "Macadonia, French."

idea came to him to signal the train.
Tearing the paper off his bundle and getting at a number of fletters, he rolled them into a heap, and for fear that he flame would die out too suddenly he added two flannel shirts from the bundle. The bundle was then made fast to the end of his walking stick, matches produced, and he waited until the headlight of the locomotive should appear up the track.

It finally greeted his vision, looking like a bright white star, as it glistened after up the track. The rumble of the train grew louder, the star grew larger and brighter. He struck his match. The flame blazed up brightly, but as he moved it toward the bundle a little gust of wind blew it out. Was there time yet? Up the track he could hear the thunder of a hundred heavy wheels, and the great light of the locomotive sleaved at him like the flame.

Another match, an instant of fear and doubt, and then the paper blazed up and curied over and around the bundle and swayed right and left withe night wind. He waved the signal of fire back and forth, and just when he was ready to believe that death under the wheels was certain he heard the whistle for brakes.

He could hear the wheels grinding and groaning, the hiss of steam as the engineer threw back his leaver, and then the heavy train came to a stop with the great light shining down upon him, paling his dying signal. He was saved, but the engine had only thirty feet more to go to crush him. The fireman came for

Dr. Dix. He is soon to lead to the attar a belle of New York, the daughter of a wealthy broker. Dr. Dix is a young man, and holds one of the highest positions in the city. He came prominently into notice as assistant minister of Trinity. The officer of rector demands executive ability of the highest order. Trinity wants something beside a preacher. Her wants something beside a preacher. Her rent roll, mortgages, leases and huge tenantry demand a business man at the head of things. Dr. Berrian, the rector, was very old and infirm. The Associate Ministry took its ease. Young Dix knew how to do things, and rather revoled in work. His associates allowed him to do his work and theirs too. When the vestry met, young Dix was always on hand met, young Dix was always on hand—always ready, and his papers were prepared in a lawyer like style. There was old law in Trinity, which had been a dead letter for nearly a century, allowing the rector to appoint anjassistant rector. Dr. Dix was nominated to the vacant cost. The appointment was releastly was releastly. post. The appointment was violently opposed, for it was at once seen that if he took that position the rectorship was sure. And so it proved. Since young Dix took the position the affairs of Trinity have been run on the strict line of ecclesisticism. He is a High Church man, therefairs on rivalism. He keeps the bordering on ritualism. He keeps the festivals and feasts of the Church very rigidly, especially the feasts. The saints' days and festivals are marked by the color of the drapery on the pulpit. An-other discovered that it would not come up because his hand was moist, and after putting sawdust on the hand he tried again, but that bell was still mean enough to stay on the floor. Then another gen-tleman tried, and could lift it with ease only he had a sore wrist; and the last man of the party could carry it to the City Hall if he had no pain in his back. The scene amused Kelly, and as he is fond of a joke he called his mother and told her to take hold of that bell and show the gentlemen that an old woman was stronger than any one of them. She at first refused, but the son at last coaxed her to take the dumb-bell. Then Kelly himself took hold of the weight, lifted it to his shoulder with ease, and, contin-uing the motion, raised it over his head and finally tossed it from one hand to the

A short time since Mr. Kelly was crossand the Hamilton Ferry, and was insulted and finally attacked by four roughs, who undertook the perilous task of flogging him. He good humoredly backed away from thomat first and skiffully puried from them at first, and skilfully parried all the blows that were aimed at him telling his assailants at the same time to keep off and not bother him. They kept up the attack, and at last Kelly, losing patience, knocked them all down by giving each a slap with his open hand. They picked themselves up as best they could, and looked puzzled. One of them slipped his hand into his pocket suspiciously as if to draw a knife. Kelly walked up to him, shook his fist in his face, dared him to draw his weapon, and promised to dash his brains out if he tried it. The fellow did not try. He brought his hand empty out of his telling his assailants at the same time t out if he tried it. The fellow did not try. He brought his hand empty out of his pocket. Then Kelly quick as lightning seized him by the wrists, placed one across the other, and held both in one of his iron fists, and before he had time to struggle, seized him by the belt with the other hand and flung him more than half way to the ladies' cabin. The man was more greeted with than hurt, and as he more greeted with than hurt, and as he got up he was greeted with a roar of laughter, in which Kelly heartily joined. Some of the sporting fraternity tried to get Mr. Kelly into the ring, but he stoutly refused to have anything to do with that institution. with that institution.

Realizing that a prolonged litigation would involve an outlay of a large sum of money, while necessarily occupying years before a final decision could be reached, and also regarding it as certain, under the decision in New York, that Mrs. St. Clair's right to a dower interest in the estate in that State was well founded, the executors of Mr. Perrese's cetate wet the counsel on the Forrest's estate met the counsel on the other side in a friendly way, and negotis ions have been going on until recently.

In furtherance of this arrangement, it became necessary to have an act of Assembly passed in the State of New York.

This was accordingly passed at the recent session of the Legislature, signed by the Governor, and is now a law.

This whole sum of $93,000 is to be paid out of the proceeds of the unimproved land of Mr. Forrest on the Hudson river, in the neighborhood of Yonk-ers, adjoining the Font Hill property, now owned and occupied by the Sisters of Mount St. Vincent.

By this settlement the executors and trustees of the Forrest Home, being re-lieved from all delays, will be enabled to go on at once and sell all the real estate in the different States, preparatory to the great work of providing for the Home for Decayed Actors, near this city, as contemplated in the will of Mr. Forcest.

Happy is the man who can get it at even that price. We truly pity the farmers, for, added to their troubles about the cotton, the corn looks dull and stunted also. Can the wrath of a just God be upon them as a jettic project, and a bill for the construc-tion of the Fort St. Phillip Canal, and fo Commence at some point below St Philip, and continue to the Gulf at some wrath of a just God be upon them as a punishment to them for their worship of "King Cotton." It does look so. This is the idol at whose shrine they worship, forgetting in their adoration Hhm who has said: "Thou shalt have no other God but me." What little cotton is made this year will bring an exorbitant price, we doubt not, while other things will go up in proportion. This truly is to be dreaded, considering the present financial emerged. Philip, and continue to the Gulf at some convenient point in Breton Pass, constructed, maintained and supervised at the expense of the government. Twenty thousand dollars is appropriated for the preliminary survey. It is to be kept open day and night, free of toll to one and all vessels whose governments are in commercial amity with ours. Louisiana shall cede its jurisdiction over the lands required by the canal and military works for its defense. The cost shall not exceed eight millions. No money to ed, considering the present financial em-barrassment of the people. The farm-ers, we fear, will come out behind-hand lers, we fear, will come out behind-hand this year. The proceeds of their cotton is what they look to to meet their liabilities, and if this fails, then their all fails. They have gone to work again, however, with renewed energy, but now another drawback presents itself. Labor is in such demand that day laborers cannot be had at any price. Not to be outdone, the farmers have taken their children away from school, both boys and girls, and put them in the fields to help plant cotton. Truly the times are distressing. The gardens, too, are in a deplorable conworks for its defense. The cost shall not exceed eight millions. No money to be expended till the entire is under contract, and eight millions is appropriated one-third of which may be expended each year. Contracts go to the lowest and best bidder, and are awarded by the and pest budger, and are awarded by the Secretary of War. No contract considuated unless accompanied by $15,000 forfeit. Contractors shall work according to plans and under directions of an engineer department. The cansi shall be completed within three years from the commencement thereof. The gardens, too, are in a deplorable condition also. We were told by several ladies that they could scarcely get anything to grow as it used to, while as fast as they put out their cabbage plants the cut-worms destroy them.
